DSM completes new factory for waterborne resins in Meppen, Germany

Royal DSM N.V. today announces that the DSM NeoResins+ expansion in Meppen, Germany, has been completed successfully. The new manufacturing unit will, amongst other things, manufacture specialty polyurethane dispersions that will find its way in high-end decorative professional and DIY trim paints, metal- and plastic coatings and parquet lacquers. Specialty urethane dispersions are experiencing high market growth, as these resins are a waterborne alternative to solvent-based coating systems and outperform the traditional systems in terms of performance and durability. In addition, these water-based dispersions do not require volatile organic compounds (VOCs) that have negative effects on the environment. Therefore, the dispersions offer an excellent alternative to achieve the VOC reduction targets that are necessary to comply with new legislation to be introduced in 2010.

This expansion is one of the many projects that DSM NeoResins+ is working on to further enhance its capability to serve its customers and markets in both the short and the long term.

Ben van Kooten, Business Group Director of DSM Resins comments: "This investment is of strategic importance and will further increase DSM's leadership position in specialty coating resins. Furthermore, it demonstrates DSM's commitment to supply its customers with innovative waterborne products in order to comply with the forthcoming European VOC legislation. It represents a further step towards the realization of DSM's ambition of generating EUR 1 billion in innovation-based sales by 2010 within the framework of its Vision 2010 strategy."
